The ZAI CORE AXE consists of a helve and two interchangeable heads. Made from a sandwich of carbon fibre zaiira® and ash wood, the form of the helve is refined to be slim and lightweight, reducing the thickness substantially to 13mm along the spine. The weight of the axe is thereby focused at the head, generating greater striking momentum and efficiency when cutting or splitting wood. The two heads are made from forged high carbon steel with a blackened finish. They can be changed using the integrated quick release system and allowing for secure head attachment, easier sharpening and safer transportation. Each head has a different function. One is for felling trees and the other for splitting logs of wood.
